

The vast majority of Australian media (regardless of format - print, TV, radio, etc) is clearly biased to the left. There are many examples of this. Coverage of Donald Trump is overwhelmingly negative. Climate change is consistently presented as fact and anyone who disagrees is essentially called a crackpot. They tell us that mass migration is great and if you don't think so then you're racist.

There are clear double standards about what people can get away with. Look at the media coverage of Scott Morrison's handling of the bushfires. He was attacked for going on holiday, but the Victorian and Queensland Premiers, both of whom are Labor, were not attacked when they did the exact same thing.

ABC is one of the most biased media outlets of all, despite the fact that they're taxpayer funded and are supposed to be impartial. They regularly have entire panels of leftists on their shows such as The Drum who make racist remarks about white people or sexist comments about men. There was one incident recently where a panel member called men rapists and that we need to kill all men. This comment went totally unchallenged. Nobody would get away with making a comment like that about women - and rightfully so. It's a terrible thing to say about any demographic.
