

Submission Regarding: Proposed Remake of the Telecommunications (Types of Cabling Work) Declaration 2013

I thank ACMA for the opportunity to provide feedback in regard to the proposed change to the Telecommunications (Types of Cabling Work) Declaration 2013.

I provide this submission as an individual, I am opposed to any change in regulation which would potentially harm safety standards in Australia.

The current regime ensures professionals handle professional tasks, it's a risk to allow self-done cabling if it means others who are not the person doing the cabling need to access those areas later down the road. In some instances, this can mean years and it could also mean a completely different person accessing the area where the cabling is that is not the original cabler.

Having a professional standard ensures safety.

Reducing safety shouldn't be an option.

Thanks.
