Dear Colleagues,

I hope you all enjoyed the long weekend for the King's Birthday Public Holiday despite the freezing temperatures across the eastern seaboard!!!

National Reconciliation Week 2025

National Reconciliation Week 2025: Bridging Now to Next concluded on Tuesday 3 June, and I hope you had the opportunity to participate in some of the initiatives at work or in your local area. View the intranet article summarising our events. A reminder that you can continue to be involved in initiatives to support better First Nations outcomes, including to volunteer to be involved in the drafting of our next Reconciliation Action Plan.

APS Employee Census 2025

The APS Employee Census 2025 closed on Friday 6 June. Thank you to all who participated. The survey allows us to hear your thoughts on our agency and the wider Australian Public Service (APS). The more of you we hear from, the better insights we will have into what we are doing well as an agency and where we can improve.

As Australia faces slower growth and rising complexity, how can public policy adapt to deliver long-term productivity and social progress? In this episode of Work with Purpose, Danielle Wood, Chair of the Productivity Commission, reflects on how the Commission's role has evolved – from her early days as a graduate to leading its national reform agenda. Hear how the commission continues to provide rigorous, independent advice in the public interest while expanding its focus to the care economy, First Nations policy and Closing the Gap. Key tips:

- Take care everyone, and as always, please let us know if you need any additional assistance or advice.
