With the new Parliament sitting for the first time last week, at the bottom of this email there are some links to recent episodes from the IPAA with discussions on what the APS can expect from the new government, and also what makes a great First Nations public servant. On that note, thank you to those of you who nominated to be a part of our Reconciliation Action Plan working group – we look forward to developing that work and will keep you updated on its progress.

- What Makes a Great First Nations Public Servant: The public service offers opportunity to contribute to positive outcomes for Australian communities and to pursue rewarding careers. It also comes with challenges, obstacles, ethical dilemmas, and racism for some of our First Nations public servants. Hear from [REDACTED]
